Wasatch Stake Seminary Building

Wasatch Stake Seminary formerly located at 2nd South and Main, south of present Wasatch County Library.

Old tithing office was located at 106 North on East Main. Built in 1888. One tenth of produce was stored here until a fire in 1903. Then members were urged to sell their products and pay in cash.

homes remain in good condition, some remodeled and improved, mostly constructed of the beautiful and sturdy sandstone, quarried by hand from the eastern hills of this valley.

It was in 1872 and 1873 that he directed the building of a Social Hall on Main Street. This building was in the vicinity of the present Coast to Coast hardware store, which at that time was just north of the Owen Buell store. It was used for town meetings, church services, dances, and theatrical performances for many years.

According to Pearl Foreman (85) and Emma Smith (91), current residents of the Heber Second Ward, "It was back off the road quite a ways. Jim Carlile was the janitor. Plays were held on the stage there, with many traveling troupes presenting entertainment, as well as local groups. It was painted white, with a white steeple on top. When we had Sunday School, red curtains were pulled on wires to separate into classrooms. Some used the balcony over the entrance. Often children were sent across the street to the Tithing Office to hold their classes. Baptisms were also performed in the Tithing Office."
